The fate of a self-proclaimed Vietnamese woman by her own daughter Isabelle Müller in the book 'LOAN From the life of a Phoenix bird ' released on March 8.

The 'daughter of the Phoenix' carries proud Vietnamese blood

By Isabelle Müller and a Northwest Upland baby.

The fate of a selfless Vietnamese woman certainly contains no less pity, which is something anyone can speculate but not easy to imagine. The fate of a Vietnamese woman to spare when married to a foreign man, the more compassionate there is. And the fate of an alien Vietnamese woman called Loan, fortunately, was rewritten by her daughter into a book "LOAN From the life of a Phoenix bird".

Book "LOAN From the life of a Phuong Hoang bird " once reached the top 5 final "Kindle Storyteller Award " 2015 and ranked best seller on Amazon (Germany). TPHCM General Publishing bought the copyright and released "LOAN From the life of a Phoenix bird" on March 8 this year.

At the beginning of the work, author Isabelle Müller defined the mother and gave a great affection to her Vietnamese mother, so touched: "Mother" is the word to refer to the mother in Vietnamese, "Loan " means "Phoenix bird". I still call my mother "Loan Mother ", as she taught her children and four siblings. No one will think of calling a mother by a different name. What is your real name and why you give up on it, only you know it, and after many years.

A strange feeling invades my soul when I write these lines today, when I'm no more, but more existential than ever. She gave me the task of writing about her mother; about her life as a woman, as my mother, about the Phoenix bird whose mother was the embodiment of being burned many times, and each time rising from the ashes ".

The mother of author Isabelle Müller, a woman named Loan, lived through a turbulent historical period in Vietnam. Then she and her husband lived in many countries around the world like France, An ri ... Where, she also encountered many great challenges but overcame and lived proudly like the Phoenix.

Read "LOAN From the life of a Phoenix bird", one generation of Vietnamese people can be seen in the time of the bombs. Whichever position, status, circumstances, they carry within themselves a "war sadness" with varying degrees of boldness.

Through the book, it is also understood that Vietnamese mothers, sisters, and women in ancient society lived devotedly and sacrificed, but had to spend two extraordinary words "" for them. Loan's burning desire was also the desire of all Vietnamese women at the time whether they had the opportunity to speak out or not, it was the desire to seek freedom!

Loan is a little girl who was once laid down along the way. At 12, Loan left home, so as not to be tortured by the whip. And a journey opens, many grim, many bitter but also many warm moments, many happy moments.

"LOAN from the life of a Phoenix bird" follows the story "The daughter of the Phoenix" once loved by the public.

Loan's life may not be encapsulated in the hundred pages written. There were periods of her life or deep sadness when words were completely helpless to describe. And the end, so gentle as a rule of nature. We can be a commoner, a noble, a king or a bird "Phoenix", we used to suffer the ultimate or the ultimate happiness, then we will finally dissolve. in the universe, as author Isabelle Müller revealed: "Part of my mother's ashes sprinkled in her garden. When I was done, a small whirlwind came, carrying her remains from the ashes that were opening the lid and rolling it into the air ".

Author Isabelle Müller was once known to the public through the book "Daughter of Phoenix bird". This time, with the release of "LOAN From the life of a Phoenix bird", author Isabelle Müller presented the full authority to the LOAN Stiftung Foundation, to help poor, disadvantaged children. difficulties in the northern mountainous provinces of Vietnam.
