UNTERREICHENBACH. Quiet, almost the people listened reverently. At the senior citizens' meeting in the Unterreichenbach community center, Isabelle Müller read from her autobiography "Phoenix Daughter" (PZ reported). "The book is phenomenal, This will definitely be an award-winning film," enthused Bernd Gengenbach really.

"Is there anything more beautiful for a child, when his mother smiled like that see?" the author concluded. And the People in the hall nodded visibly. Because they suffered with Isabelle Müller when her long-awaited trip with her mother in her home country Vietnam at the arbitrary behavior of the border guards threatened to fail. Or they laughed loud, as on the adventurous Journey through the Uzbek steppe the second tire burst and the car was only on smoking rims. They also had a vivid impression of the cheerful fruit seller Ahmet at a bazaar in Kazakhstan. "One has become more knowledgeable," summarized Anne Keppler. Life here is like in

Land of Cockaigne in contrast to Müller's descriptions of the way of life of the people in Vietnam and Russia.

"The stages were very well imagine", was also Wiltrud. Victory impressed. "Now I'm curious become," revealed Brigitte Otbar, that they absolutely have to read this book. "It is admirable what Isabelle Müller in her life everything", said Gisela Kuhlmann. Once a month, She and Ruth Maisenbacher organized the senior citizens' meeting. This time, Many younger people came because you should not miss the reading. It's amazing that she had the strength to write the whole thing down," said Ruth Maisenbacher. "It just gives you goosebumps," says Heide Vogel.

And how did Isabelle Müller manage to escape from deep hardship such as exclusion, racism and sexual abuse, someone wanted to know. "I have

I set goals that will make my life made sense," Isabelle Müller replied with a charming smile.
