Writer Isabelle Müller launched a book on separation for young children

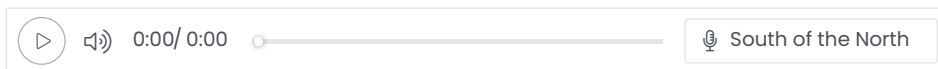

Thursday 19/05/2022 11:20 (GMT+7)

"Hip Hop in the country of Ellsaby was first published in Germany in 2001. Later, Isabelle often received letters from child therapists and bereaved support associations expressing appreciation for the work."

The story of a soldier defending the sky: 'I understand under my flight is all the most sacred of the Fatherland'

South of the North

(PLVN) – "Hip Hop in the land of Ellsaby" has just been launched. This is the first children's work by writer Isabelle Müller to be released in Vietnam.

Hip Hop in the country of Ellsaby is the first work on children of female writers. The story revolves around the zealous friendship of the Titus dog and the Hip Hop flea. When Titus suddenly died. Hip Hop is determined to set out to find his deceased friend, only with the desire to meet one last time to say goodbye. Listened to the land of Ellsaby, the chance to meet my best friend Titus has arrived. Hip Hop after so many times "scratching peeling skin " has also found a way to Ellsaby ...

The idea of writing a book begins with the author's unforgettable memories in the village of Baden-Württemberg (Germany), 20 years ago. The writer witnessed the image of a grieving girl because the beloved dog died, to the point where she could not afford to live.

Writer Isabelle Müller shared that at a time when very few children's literary works were written on topics of separation or death, she composed a story to read to her. "When I read to her the first adventure of Hip Hop, her sadness gradually. I'm glad to see her soap bubbles occasionally soar. I have achieved my goal " – the writer said.

Hip Hop in the country of Ellsaby is a rare, meaningful work that soothes and heals the sorrows of young children. The scheme of separation pain, death rarely appears in
